Nominations for Project of the Year recognise outstanding National Lottery-funded projects that are making a difference for people and heritage across the UK.

Since 1994, The National Lottery has raised more than £47billion for good causes. We have distributed £8.2bn of this to more than 46,000 projects across the UK.

Each year, the National Lottery Awards celebrate the inspirational people and projects who do extraordinary things with the help of that funding. An Tobar won the 2022 Project of the Year award for their work engaging young people with the natural and cultural heritage of Brian's Wood in Northern Ireland.

This year's shortlist includes four heritage projects funded by us. Which one will you vote for?

Bangor Court House

The view from the back of the room shows a crowd of people and a concert stage lit up with vibrant colours Bangor Court House is a leading cultural renaissance for the city.

The Court House, which opened in October 2022, engages the community with its extensive creative programme, having held 500 events in its first year. It has boosted the local economy and reconnected people with their city centre.

The Victorian building dates back to the 1860s and has been left unused since 2013, until local arts charity Open House Festival transformed it into a vibrant non-profit music and arts venue.

Based in Leicester, the programme connects 250 young people from under-served communities with 50 people who were part of the local and iconic 1970s Punk scene. The participants shared their thoughts on social and cultural issues and created art, music and fashion during the 18-month project.

Led by Soft Touch Arts in partnership with Arch Creative and the independent curator Shaun Knapp, the collaborative work has been brought together in an exhibition at Leicester Museum & Art Gallery.

The community group honour the lives of those once forgotten.

This local community group have spent over three years rejuvenating Hartwood Cemetery and giving the names and dignity back to 1,255 once forgotten individuals.

Hartwood Cemetery became the final resting place for those who died after being admitted to Hartwood Asylum, once the largest asylum in Europe. Since 2019 the volunteer-led group successfully matched the 1,255 names to their grave plots and notified their family members.

The volunteers have also turned the cemetery into a blossoming green space by planting trees and introducing beehives.

Underwater cameras are used to collect current data of sea life in Welsh waters.

Project SIARC – Sharks Inspiring Action and Research with Communities – aims to protect sea life as well as engage communities with Wales' coastal environment.

Scientists and fishers in Wales are working to collect historical and current data on sharks, skates and rays.

This research is then used to engage primary schools through a range of interactive sessions and inspire a new generation of conservationists.
