Open data

We are committed to giving people the information they need about our grant funding.

For this reason we support open data, which is data that is:

- published proactively
- provided in machine-readable formats (such as csv)
- provided for re-use

We adhere to the following principles in providing our data:

- timely publication – we will release and update our data on an annual basis
- we provide disaggregated data
- we use common standards by working with the 360Giving initiative to also publish our grant data through GrantNav
- respect privacy – only non-personal data is published

Key data about The National Lottery Heritage Fund

Since we were established in 1994, we have invested £9.5billion in 53,000 projects across the UK. This includes money raised by National Lottery players and funding we've distributed on behalf of governments across the UK.

We have awarded:
