Future Heritage

Discover the latest thinking about the future of the UK's heritage sector.

We are living through extraordinary times. The coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic brought unprecedented challenges to our sector. We are still dealing with its longer-term effects, compounded by the economic and environmental crises.

We have had to adapt to survive. Alongside the challenges there have been opportunities. From expanding the use of digital technologies, celebrating the importance of place, nature and community, to building and strengthening partnerships and embracing innovation.

In our Future Heritage blog series, leading figures from across the sector share their thoughts on what might lie ahead for heritage, offering advice and encouraging debate.
