Still waters run deep at Ipswich's Broomhill Pool

20/12/2017

Adiverusing/Broomhill Pool in its heyday

A diver using Broomhill Pool in its heyday Ray Marshall

Ipswich's Grade II listed Broomhill Pool is to be restored to its former glory, thanks to a £3.4million National Lottery grant.

The Art Deco building, which was constructed in 1938, has been closed for 15 years. Now the neglected site will be given a new lease of life as an open air swimming pool and fitness centre.

When the original facility was built, outdoor swimming and diving were in vogue both as a pastime and spectator event. In its heyday, the pool had a grandstand that could seat 700, and catered for as many as 2000 visitors a day. However, in more recent years these numbers declined, and the pool was closed in 2002.

The National Lottery-supported project, run by fitness and leisure charity Fusion Lifestyle, will restore the pool and diving boards, allow the water to be heated and erect a replica clock tower in the buildings' original art-deco style.

With a pool, as well as year-round fitness and wellbeing centre, galleries, displays and events such as film screenings, local residents will once again have a multi-purpose community space.

Ipswich Borough Council have also committed £1m towards the project costs with the remaining £2m being funded directly by Fusion Lifestyle.

Mark Ling of the Broomhill Pool Trust said: "Well done and a massive thank you to Fusion Lifestyle, HLF and to Ipswich Borough Council for their shared commitment and vision.

"After an epic 15-year campaign, we are delighted that one of Britain's finest lidos - and a much loved part of Ipswich's heritage - has not only been saved, but will be enhanced!"

You might also be interested in...

Richard Bellamy, Pennaeth CDL yng Nghyrmu Richard Bellamy, Pennaeth CDL yng Nghyrmu Patrick Olner

Diving in to heritage at Pontypridd Lido

StaMary at the Quay will be turned into a wellbeing heritage centre St Mary at the Quay will be turned into a wellbeing heritage centre

All eyes on Ipswich's heritage