

IT'S CROSSED
FINGER
SELFIE TIME!

Join us in saying a big #ThanksToYou to National Lottery players, for funding amazing projects across the UK

Together, thousands of people will post crossed finger selfies on Tuesday 14th November 2023 to say a massive collective thank you to National Lottery players for their colossal contribution to good causes across the UK, and you're invited to take part.

14th November also marks the day the first tickets for the National Lottery went on sale, 29 years ago in 1994.

As a project that has received National Lottery funding, you're part of an incredible network of more than 110,000 organisations who change lives every day – and whose work is supported by National Lottery players.

How can I get involved?

It's easy to join in. We are asking you to rally your supporters – including any of your volunteers, staff, service users - with a very simple ask:

- Share your crossed finger selfie on Tuesday 14th November 2023
- Include a message about how National Lottery players have helped your organisation, and say thank you to National Lottery players by using the hashtags #ThanksToYou and #NationalLottery

As well as being an iconic symbol of The National Lottery, crossed fingers are a symbol of hope -
helping people to make the connection between the game, and the good causes it supports.

Who can get involved?

On the day, we'd love you to post crossed finger selfies to your organisation's social accounts and urge your supporters to do the same.

For example, you could reach out to:

- Staff and volunteers
- Service users and beneficiaries
- Senior stakeholders – e.g. your local politicians
- Fundraisers

Feel free to get creative with your own crossed finger selfies – add fun props or branding, take your crossed finger pics outside, at your venues or projects, or out-and-about in your community... The sky is the limit!

Why?

Projects and organisations all over the UK will be posting selfies on Tuesday 14th November 2023 – from national charities to grassroots groups - and we'd love you to be part of this remarkable day of celebration.

Getting involved is a great chance to highlight how your charity or group has made a real difference to people in your local community.

By posting crossed finger selfies on the day, it will show that you are part of an incredible network of life-changing charities and community groups who change lives every day, and highlight the impact that National Lottery players have had by funding your work.

Using the hashtag #ThanksToYou and #NationalLottery will also boost your social media and brand visibility on the day and give more people the chance to hear about your project
